President Sue Brobst. Fifty mem-

bountiful repast at 6:30. The busi-numbers had been arranged by Miss Lucile Close. Miss Dorothy Edwards, a young pianist, played "Polonaise ration. She said, in part: "Do not hesitate to be ambitious. Grasp a vision fitted to the hour and make it practical; it is of little value, otherwise. We are here for expression.

Let us be tolerant to others in their expression of life. While we work, others wish to play. Each member should be allowed an expression of her desires." Miss Brobst closed with the words, "Do not tear down until you can give something better."

An invitation was conveyed by Miss Brobst to the district officers to hold the district meeting in March

Turn of the Tide

Subdivision flags are being flung to the breeze again in Southern California.

The past eight months have been quiet ones in real estate, both in the heart of Los Angeles and in its environs. It was inevitable that this would be, because building and subdividing in any locality cannot be kept at the peak continuously.

But now there is beginning to be a healthy and conservative demand again, caused by the passing of the vacation season, the recovery of the state from quarantines, the working out of a glutted subdivision market condition hanging over from last winter, and a generally better tone in business throughout the state and country. A year of the Dawes plan in Europe has had a beneficial reflection in South American trade between all countries. Pacific coast products are moving to Argentina and Brazil in larger volume than has been the case since 1922.

General crop conditions in the state are better than the last crop period. We have experienced a satisfactory citrus year, and the walnut estimate in tonnage is greater than last year. Despite a temporary slump in oil production and real estate the general business of Los Angeles shows an increase, as indicated in bank clearings.

All signs point strongly to a fall and winter of activity to compare favorably with the high peak years of recent Southern California history.

United States Rich Without Exploitation

The United States has become incomparably the richest nation in the world, according to the July number of the National Republic, and this has come about through exploitation of injury of no other nations, but by reason of American resources, energy, enterprise and industry. Continuing the article says:

"Statistics collected from official sources by the National Industrial Conference board show that the United States has as compared with the entire world:

- 6.2 per cent of its population;
- 57.9 of its area;
- 37.9 of its installed water power;
- 57.8 of its telephone and telegraph wire in use;
- 33.9 of its railway mileage;
- 82.7 of its automobiles and motor trucks;
- 43.5 of its coal production;
- 71.9 of its petroleum production;
- 52.7 of its copper smelter production;
- 46.1 of its lead smelter production;
- 21.3 of its cereal production other than wheat;
- 52 of its cotton production;
- 52.6 of its lumber production;
- 60.2 per cent of its pig iron production;
- 59.8 of its steel ingot and casting production;
- 70.99 of its rubber consumption.

The complaint that the United States prospers at the expense of the rest of the world is made in ignorance. It prospers because it produces all out of proportion to population and area. Other portions of the world of equal area are almost as rich in resources. America has prospered because she produces, earns. Her production is based on the highest labor costs in the world. Most of it is consumed within the borders of the United States."

Covinaite Describes The Hudson River

It is said there are four rivers famous for beauty, but each of a different type. They are the Thames, Elba, Amazon, and the Hudson.

One of the peculiar differences between the Hudson and the Amazon is that whereas there is such a strong current in the Amazon that fresh water is encountered as much as one hundred miles out in the ocean, the Hudson has very little current. In fact salt water is encountered up the river for considerable distance. That is why the Hudson is called the "Drowned River."

Geologists claim that a long time ago the Hudson carried the drainage from the Great Lakes. That was probably during the glacial period. Along its banks some of our earliest history has been written. This is where Washington did a lot of campaigning. A flag still waves above his old headquarters. West Point is located on it.

On both sides of the river, close to the riverbank, railroad trains run at terrific speed. Speed is the watchword in the east. Everything is speeded up except the current in the Hudson.

A trip down the Hudson, particularly in the fall of the year, is one long to be remembered. Leaving Albany in the morning, it is an all-day trip filled with ever-changing scenery. The banks slope back from the water's edge, in some places nearly a mile, and are covered with a variety of verdure, which at this time of the year is beautifully colored. Only nature could blend such colors. To lovers of colored foliage, this is a rare treat. Interest in this landscape are numerous farms and country estates which add to its beauty and charm. Hills of different sizes and shapes are numerous and appear to get larger until finally the Catskill mountains appear in the distance. These are the mountains where Rip Van Winkle had his famous sleep. From the river at a certain angle (of course with a stretch of imagination) one can see the face of old Rip formed of the rising and falling of the peaks. The forehead, the nose, and the long chin are plainly discernable.

You are impressed as you travel down the river with the large number of ice-houses on both banks. The houses are very large. Here is where one first gets the impression that New York is a large city. One wonders where all that ice can be used. The ice is loaded into barges and towed down the river to New York city. Several barges are lashed together and two or three tug boats are attached by means of long cables. This is the method used in delivering ice to the city.

All the bridges crossing the river are of the permanent type and are built very high, in order to let steamers pass under them. There are a number of steamers plying on the river carrying both freight and passengers. A trip up the river to one of the landing places, and then a hike through the hills is a favorite jaunt of the hiking clubs of New York city.

Returning steamers on Sunday are filled to capacity with people who have spent the day in the country hiking and picnicking. Dancing on the boat is not allowed. On board the steamer religious services are conducted on Sunday. A short sermon is delivered and community singing follows. Music is furnished by an orchestra. This program is continued all afternoon until the boat arrives at New York city. The sun gradually sets and darkness steals upon the scene and ere you realize it the boat commences to unload its human freight and you find yourself upon the streets of New York.

Little old New York, with all its noise, hurry, hustle, dirt, screeching taxis and whatnot. But that is a story in itself, which I will write later.

MOTHER AND BABY GIVEN "SHOE" SURPRISE PACKAGE

Mrs. A. G. O'Brien and her three months daughter, Arlene Theresa, were given a happy surprise Saturday afternoon at their home on Vine street. A group of ladies came to call, bringing with them a huge shoe filled with suspicious-looking packages, each bearing a baby's face and making this shoe much like the one in nursery rhymes.

Just before the presentation of this shoe of baby faces to Mrs. O'Brien, Mrs. Leo Gorman, accompanied by Mrs. Tom Finch, sang a little song composed for the occasion by Mrs. A. W. Feist. The song was a parody on the "old lady who lived in a shoe." The remainder of the afternoon was spent embroidering nursery rhymes on blocks to be made into a quilt for little Arlene.

Mrs. Charles Speer and Mrs. Andrew Feist, the hostesses for the occasion, served dainty refreshments of salad, sandwiches, cake and coffee. The guests were Meses. Harry Webber, Cayless, E. H. Walters, Seth Colver, Raymond Finch, Tom Finch, Paul Custer, O. H. Jaroch, E. M. Rosworth, E. G. Hotchkiss, W. P. Magan, J. D. Bixby, Jr., Peter Feddersohn, George Carson, Rourke, W. J. Gorman, W. J. Citrus Growers Inspect Exchange Saw Mills

(Editor's note: Nearly every citrus grower is interested in the lumbering operations of the Fruit Growers Supply Company at Susanville and Hilt, due to the fact that at these two points are logged and sawed the lumber necessary for the millions of boxes required annually in the packing of the orange and lemon crops of Southern California. On account of distance involved few are able to visit these mills and for that reason we asked Mr. Henry Damerel, one of the foremost growers and packers of the San Gabriel valley, to furnish the Argus readers with an account of his recent inspection.)

A committee consisting of George Ferguson, W. J. Gregg, P. H. Maurer and myself from the board of directors of the San Dimas Lemon association, and T. Roe Hobbs, the secretary-manager, left on September 27th for a trip to cover the logging and lumbering operations of the Fruit Growers Supply Company. The party went by auto, the trip taking two weeks of rather strenuous traveling to properly cover the ground.

At Susanville, Lassen county, is located the larger of the two lumbering operations of the Fruit Growers, and near here they own 43,192 acres of fine timber land, containing one billion feet of pine and fir. It was here the committee had an opportunity to see the most approved logging methods. The Fruit Growers Supply Company has co-operated closely with the United States forest service in its program of systematic reforestation.

In its logging the Supply Company has always followed a policy in harmony with approved Forest Service methods, conducting its operations in such a manner as to leave standing and unharmed as much as possible of the young growth of the forest, and leaving a sufficient supply of suitable seed trees per acre for reproduction. It is estimated that such a policy would result in a perpetual yield and permit a cutting cycle of 40 to 60 year periods.

One of the interesting features of the logging operation was the caterpillar tractors. They disappear into the woods and in an incredible short time reappear dragging a large load of logs with minimum damage to the young trees.

At Camp 8, on the Supply Company's railroad and about thirty-eight miles from the Susanville sawmill, an opportunity to lunch with the lumberjacks was taken advantage of. These boys have keen appetites and six to seven minutes is all the time required to put away a good substantial meal.

The falling of trees five feet in diameter and from 200 to 400 years old was in progress on a burnt area of government timber. The timber was available to the Supply Company at a very reasonable price as their railroad made it easily accessible. It is necessary to cut this timber within a period of eighteen months after a fire, otherwise it is destroyed by the wood worms. The logs, after being delivered to the side of the railroad by the tractors, are picked up by a large hoist and a car is loaded in a very short time, and the train with thirty cars pulls out for the saw mill. The day spent at this camp gave an opportunity to see the entire logging operations and the next day was spent in the Susanville saw mill.

Very early in the morning standing in front of the mill were about sixty cars of logs. These were all unloaded during the day. Here the committee had a chance to follow the logs from the pond through the saw mill and observe the workings of one of the most efficient mills on the coast. They were cutting 250,000 feet in the ten-hour shift. The annual cut is seventy million feet. This is indeed a large business, when one considers the directing of 1200 men in the entire operation, from forest to the finished product of boxes and high grade lumber. The time spent in the mill was very instructive and interesting. Every department seemed to be working in fine shape.

There was no loafing, the men all working under the best conditions of a safety-first plan. Henry Ford once said if he was asked to take charge of a factory which did not pay, the first thing he would do would be to clean up and improve the working conditions of the men. Here we found a mill entirely to his liking for everything was clean and the lumber was well piled and well ventilated. For comparison, some time was spent in one of the other mills belonging to a very large lumber company with a long experience in the lumber business. The result of this visit made us proud of the growers' achievement in developing a mill such as Susanville. The committee was conducted through the mill by the manager and was able to get first-hand information from E. B. Birmingham, with whom considerable time was spent in a general discussion of the entire workings of both logging and mill operations.

A journey was then made to Hilt, which is 20 miles further north, located in Siskiyou county, and just south of the Oregon line. This is the older plant and is under the management of A. E. Stonehouse. The Supply company has here 28,883 acres of timber land, something over 205 million feet standing. The mill capacity is 130,000 feet in ten hour shift. The annual cut is approximately twenty-five million feet and there are 379 men employed.

The town of Hilt is owned and looked after by the Fruit Growers Supply Company and all phases of civic and social plans seem to be in fine working order. Mrs. Stonehouse, wife of the manager, is a great factor in making the social life of this little community a success. In going to the woods it was necessary to travel eighteen miles on a logging train as this territory is very steep and rough. Donkey engines are used exclusively as it is impossible to use horses or even tractors. The logs are handled by long cables, being transferred from one line to another, often travelling three to four thousand feet before being delivered to the railroad for loading. Both mills have a very complete railroad system for hauling the logs from the woods to the mills.

Both steam and electric power are made possible for the two mills by the burning of sawdust and waste. With a new gluing process the waste lumber is largely converted into various kinds of box ends, and one could readily see that a saving running into six figures could be made annually by the two mills. About one half of the lumber is made into boxes and the balance into high grade lumber, which makes the business more profitable. One of the real values of the lumber mills is that it is possible to turn out, if necessary, the twenty million boxes used annually by the Exchange growers. Furthermore, what would have been the conditions had there been no Supply Company.

Several of the committee well remembered that in 1906 the Pine Box Agency raised the price of boxes from thirteen cents to twenty cents. This was one of the reasons the Supply Company decided to protect the grower's interest and place themselves in a position as soon as possible to manufacture their own boxes. It is quite evident that the Supply Company is founded on a sound basis and came into existence only through well recognized necessity.

On the whole, very little, if any, criticism could be made, while on the other hand, with lumber prices where they should be we believe the Fruit Growers Supply Company is in a position to make a million dollars a year from its lumbering operations, as they will be able to take advantage of the opportunity when it comes. This trip was made at the suggestion of F. B. Hutensons, who is the competent general manager of the Fruit Growers Supply Company.

The committee would recommend that any of the Exchange growers who have an opportunity should visit one or both of these lumber mills. They will receive the most courteous treatment at the hands of both Mr. Birmingham and Mr. Stonehouse, resident managers at Susanville and Hilt.

Richard Barthelmess in "Shore Leave" Film

For tonight (Friday) and tomorrow at the Covina theater the offering will be "Shore Leave," featuring Richard Barthelmess and Dorothy Mackaill. This show has been making a hit at the big Los Angeles picture houses, and it is expected that it will fill the Covina house on these nights.

Sunday and Monday nights Laura La Plante will be starred in "The Teaser," with Ben O'Malley. It's a hitting comedy surrounding a pretty girl who tries to flirt to annoy her aristocratic family.

"One Glorious Night," which appears here Tuesday and Wednesday nights, features Elaine Hammerstein in the story of a young girl who has to give up her child because she does not want it to suffer poverty.

"One Way Street," Thursday night only, features Ben Lyon and Anna Q. Nilsson. This has been one of the year's sensations in the literary field. The picture was produced from the novel by Beale Davis—a novel which, within a month after its publication, had bounded up into the best seller in its class.

ONE-PROFIT

Facilities Alone Make Possible

this Sedan of fine quality—at the lowest price ever placed on a Sedan by Studebaker

THERE was a time when the automobile buyer seeking greatest value for his dollar was justified in considering a car of second-grade quality, which was reasonably satisfactory from the standpoint of transportation alone.

But with the advent of Studebaker's One-Profit manufacturing policy, cars of the finest quality, such as the Standard Six Sedan illustrated below, are now only slightly higher in price than those of second grade.

This small difference in price is practically nothing in comparison to the vast difference in materials and workmanship—plus increased pride of ownership, and the extra service—that a Studebaker gives.

Under this One-Profit system we build in our own plants all bodies, engines, clutches, steering gears, differentials, springs, gear sets, axles, gray iron castings and drop forgings. Thus we eliminate extra profits and overhead that all other manufacturers (except Ford) must pay to outside parts and body makers—and what we save goes to the buyers of Studebaker cars.

And because we have facilities for manufacturing all vital parts on this One-Profit basis, we are able to design, engineer and build every Studebaker car as a complete harmonious unit. Being Unit-Built, the Studebaker functions as a unit—with all the advantages of unit over assembled construction.

The result is years longer life—scores of thousands of miles of excess transportation—greater riding comfort—minimum repair costs—and, finally, higher resale value.

A UNIT-BUILT CAR

Value Stabilized by
"No-Yearly-Models"

THE fine Studebaker Standard Six Sedan illustrated below is upholstered in genuine wool cloth. Carpets are wool. Windows are real plate glass. Four wide doors.

Equipment includes an 8-day clock, gasoline gauge, coincidental lock to ignition and steering gear, automatic windshield cleaner, ash receiver, rear-view mirror, stop light, dome light, safety lighting control on steering wheel, and full-size balloon tires.

This Sedan has many superiorities—hidden as well as obvious. Body pillars are of fine northern white ash, cross-members of hard maple. We pay a premium for the best steels.

Slam the door and the sound says "quality." Swing on the door. Run one wheel up on the curb and note how the doors still open and close—how the motor still runs smoothly. Sit on the firm, heavy fenders. Try the steering gear. See how easily it handles the full-size balloon tires. Test the comfort of the deep, wide seats.

Run the engine—the most powerful in any car of its size and weight, according to the ratings of the N. A. C. C. and the Society of Automotive Engineers. This is Studebaker's lowest priced Sedan. Make comparisons—then realize why no car at a comparable price has more than superficial resemblance.
